MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

The Thirty-second annual course of instruction in this Department, will commence on Monday, the 15th of November,* 1869, and terminate on the second Saturday of March, 1870. Preliminary Lectures on Clinical Medicine and Surgery will be delivered in the amphitheatre of the Charity Hospital, beginning on the 18th of October, without any charge to students.

In making this announcement, the Faculty would congratulate the numerous alumni and friends of the Institution upon its continued prosperity, and upon the largely increased facilities for instruction, which, through the liberality of the Legislature of the State, they can now offer to those who desire to make themselves proficient in the various departments of medicine. The means of teaching now at the command of the Faculty are unsurpassed in the United States; and are quite as complete as those of many of the renowned Schools of Medicine abroad. As evidence of this, it may be stated that, in addition to the regular didactic lectures given by the several Professors, there is attached to each separate chair a Practical Department, in which students can observe and verify for themselves the facts inculcated and discussed in the lecture room. To these have been added, also, departments for teaching practically several special objects, such as Diseases of the Eye and Ear, Auscultation and Percussion, Minor and Operative Surgery, etc., etc. It is to this peculiar feature of the University, and its unequalled hospital advantages, that the Faculty would direct the attention of those engaged in the study of medicine, or who having graduated elsewhere, desire to perfect themselves in any one or other of the branches of the profession.

Immediately after the issue of the last Annual Circular, Professor Joseph Jones, M.D. was called to the chair of Chemistry, and delivered the ensuing course of lectures on that branch. Professor Jones' wide reputation as an earnest and conscientious laborer in more than one department of natural science; his success as a teacher while in connection with the Medical College of the State of Georgia, and more lately with the University of Nashville; and the great favor with which his recent lectures have been received by the students of the South-west, give abundant assurance that his services will prove a valuable addition, not only to the School but to the community at large.

*In case an Epidemic of Yellow Fever should occur during the summer, Students may, nevertheless, have no hesitation in coming to the city at the time here designated. During the thirty-two years of the existence of the Medical Department no student has been known to die of Yellow Fever, during attendance upon lectures.

Didactic Lectures.—Systematic didactic instruction in the various branches will be given daily in the central building of the University, situated on Common street, between Baronne and Dryades streets. The means for illustrating this course consists of a large collection of Natural Anatomical Pieces, prepared by, and under the immediate direction of, the Professor of Anatomy ; Models in Wood, Wax, Plaster, and Papier Mâché, of rare and beautiful workmanship executed in London, Paris, and Florence, expressly for the University ; a complete series of Specimens in Materia Medica ; Surgical and Obstetrical Instruments and appliances ; Specimens in Morbid Anatomy ; and an entire set of Chemical and Philosophical Apparatus.

The Museum comprising these collections has been recently rearranged and classified, and is accessible to students and visitors at all hours of the day. During the past year, large and valuable additions in Comparative Anatomy and American Archæology have been made by Professor Joseph Jones, M. D.

Library and Reading Rooms.—The large building known as the East Wing of the University, having been recently appropriated to and connected with the Medical Department, the Faculty have succeeded in establishing a Free Library and Reading Room for the use of students and physicians. The spacious hall selected for this purpose now contains a large collection of books already in the possession of the Institution, which are thus made accessible to those who may desire to consult them.

All the leading Medical Journals, both domestic and foreign, and most of the new works on medicine, and the collateral branches published in this country, will be placed upon the table as they are received ; and the Faculty hereby extend a cordial invitation to all physicians visiting the city to take advantage of the opportunity here afforded of making themselves acquainted with the current literature of the profession. Neither the books nor journals will be allowed to be taken from the building, but every facility will be provided for consulting them in the library room. The library will be open to visitors several hours of each day.

Clinical Instruction.—The act establishing the University of Louisiana gives the Professors of the Medical department the use of the Charity Hospital as a school of practical instruction.

The Charity Hospital contains 630 beds, and its advantages for professional study are unequalled by any similar institution in this country. The Medical, Surgical, and Obstetric wards are visited by the respective Professors in charge daily, from 8 to 10 o'clock, A. M., at which time all the students are expected to attend and familiarize themselves at the bed-side of the patients with the diagnosis and treatment of all forms of injury and disease.

Special instruction will be given to the Candidates for Graduation, who will, for this purpose, be divided by the Dean of the Faculty into sections, and assigned to respective Professors in charge of wards in the hospital. The sections thus formed will interchange courses monthly to enable the students in each to enjoy equal advantages. Thoroughly competent physicians as Chiefs of Clinic will aid the Clinical Teachers in developing to its full extent this system of instruction. The following Professors and their respective Chiefs of Clinic have been selected by the Faculty for the ensuing session :
